Forecast For Southwest England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Friday 11 Jun 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Rather cloudy today, but warm and sunny for the weekend.

Today:
A cloudy day across the southwest peninsular with some coastal fog and the odd spot of rain or drizzle through the morning; perhaps some brighter spells later in the day. Brighter with sunny spells in the northeast of the region. Maximum temperature 23 deg C (73 deg F).

Tonight:
A cloudy start to the night with some hill fog, but any cloud clearing away overnight to leave clear skies behind. Minimum temperature 10 deg C (50 deg F).

Saturday:
A warm and sunny day across the southwest after any early, lingering cloud has burnt away under the strong summer sunshine. Light winds. Maximum temperature 23 deg C (73 deg F).

Outlook for Sunday to Tuesday:
Very warm and sunny on Sunday. Warm and sunny on Monday, but with some cloud perhaps affecting the southwest Peninsular. Mostly fine and sunny on Tuesday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.